

Movies I've Watched

1 Thoughts

For four years running I have watched 100 new-to-me movies. After each hundred, I always enjoy looking back at the list of movies as a way to reflect on the year that has passed. The vast majority of the films I watch are American productions which is no surprise. 69 of the 104 movies were produced in the United States. The next closest nation was France with 9. While I probably should try and look outside my border more, there was a total of 17 different countries represented this year. Which is not bad. What follows is what I would consider some of the highlights of the year and the actual list of films.

1.1 Favorite Action Movie

Hands down it was The Raid: Redemption. It was really refreshing to have an action movie keep the stakes low while keeping the tension high. With blockbusters like the The Avengers and The Dark Knight Rises the world or the universe are on the line. This is not the case with The Raid: Redemption the whole story is just about a single building. The choreography is amazing, but what makes it a great action movie is the fact that they were able to make it literally non-stop action. They set up the situation and then the movie just takes off from there. This is why it is so good, it doesn't feel the need to tell the audience the characters motivations and feelings in a scene of dialogue. The Raid: Redemption attempts to develop these within the action beats.

1.2 Favorite Wes Anderson Movie

Okay, I am a Wes Anderson fanboy. So I just have to say that I really loved Moonrise Kingdom. I am not going to defend Anderson's stylistic choices if you don't enjoy his visual style this movie won't change that. While Moonrise Kingdom is nothing too far from what you would expect from a Wes Anderson directed movie, I think what it is trying to say about the nature of being an adulthood through the lens of a child is interesting and well done.

1.3 Favorite Movie About Nested Stories Through Time

You would think Cloud Atlas would be the obvious (and only) choice for this category, but I thought the Japanese film, Fish Story, was a better overall movie. Fish Story tells the story of a Japanese punk song and the butterfly effect it has through time. The narrative is a lot less ambitious than Cloud Atlas. Which allows for the connection between each subplot to be more clear and meaningful.

1.4 Favorite Movie About the Nature of Story

This one is a tie between two French films. One from 1974 called Celine and Julie Go Boating and the other from this year called Holy Motors. What I find interesting about these two films is that Celine and Julie Go Boating shows how memory and story are tied together by telling the same story over and over. Holy Motors, on the other hand, delves into the nature of story as entertainment by telling many different plots within a single narrative. Both are very surreal, and both question the idea of truth and reality quite heavily.

1.5 Favorite Documentary

The Waiting Room takes place in a hospital waiting room over a single 24-hour day. This movie does what I think documentaries do best it gives us a window into another person's story. This movie could easily have made a bunch of graphics and told us what is wrong with our health care system, but rather it shows us the effect it has on the people in the system.

1.6 Favorite "What Did I Just Watch?" Movie

Probably Outside Satan wins this one, due to the sheer fact that I asked myself that question about 15 times walking back to my car after seeing it. Visually this movie is stunning. The majority of the movie is done in long shots of mountains, valleys, and countryside. This really demonstrates the smallness of man when compared to nature. The whole movie skirts the line between the real and the surreal in a way that ultimately made me ponder the what is good and what is evil. This is a very subtle film, and I think the uneasiness the film presents is in large part due to that subtlety.

I would also like to say that Wrong deserves an honorable mention in the category. I liked Durpieux's second film much more than I liked his first, Rubber. He really nailed down his absurdest style in Wrong.

1.7 Favorite Movie I Don't Know Why it Took Me So long to See

Probably Once Upon a Time in the West, I mean holy crap is that movie epic.
